ABSTRACT

Designed for use by parents and Head Start facilities in Ohio, the manual outlines procedures for identifying preschool handicapped children. The first chapter explores the rationale for identification of handicapped children. In the second chapter, Ohio standards for inclusion in special education are provided in eight handicapping categories along with definitions of handicapping conditions used by Head Start programs. Instructions for the use of various forms (and the forms themselves) instrumental in the identification process are given in the third chapter. Chapter 4 discusses other agency considerations such as follow through activities and parent roles. Appendixes include definitions of relevant terms, addresses of Ohio agencies that assist in child find activities, and information useful in referring handicapped children to Ohio school districts. Special thanks to the many Head Start and Special Education personnel throughout Ohio who have made a personal commitment to link preschool handicapped children with services which will help them to lead happy, productive lives. Thanks also to Marnie Morrison, who served as project consultant and Sonartha Johnson, who typed the manuscript.

Introduction

It is important to locate and provide assistance to every handicapped child as early as possible in order to insure that each child will have the greatest opportunity to benefit from training and educational opportunities. Recent federal and state laws and regulations provide assurances that every handicapped child will be located, and will be provided with appropriate educational opportunities.

However, it is important for those of us who work with preschoolers to cooperate in referring each handicapped child to agencies that can provide for the child's needs. This manual has been designed to assist parents and Head Start agencies in referring preschool handicapped children to the State Department of Education for its use in planning to provide educational opportunities to those children.

Although the manual has been designed for use by parents and Head Start facilities, any agency serving preschool handicapped children may use the information as a model for referring those children to the State Department of Education. It is hoped that the procedures outlined will provide an efficient referral method and that as a result of these cooperative efforts handicapped children will be identified and receive appropriate educational services as early as possible.

WHY

Why should handicapped children be identified?

should handicapped children be identified?

So handicapped children will be found and helped as early in their schooling as possible.

A child who receives the right kind of help at the beginning of his/her schooling will have the best chance to learn. The sooner a child's handicap is discovered, the sooner he or she will be able to receive any special services needed. This philosophy is the basis upon which Head Start programs are provided.

So schools can plan ahead.

It is important to provide accurate and complete information to the State Department of Education through SERRC/Child-Find (Project OHIO) so that the local schools can plan ahead. Schools need to know:

- how many suspected handicapped children will be coming to school each year
- what kind of special evaluations, programs and services may need to be made available to those children
- how schools can best arrange to meet the individual needs of each child.

The State Department of Education through "Child-Find" sends such information to the federal government so that funds will be made available to Ohio's schools to provide needed services to handicapped children.

There are now both federal and state laws that are based on the need to:

- locate handicapped children as early in their schooling as possible
- and
- provide handicapped children with appropriate educational programs and services

In 1975, Public Law 94-142 was passed to assure that all handicapped children have available to them a free, appropriate public education designed to meet their special needs. (That law is called P.L. 94-142 -- The Education of All Handicapped Children Act.) In Ohio, handicapped children may receive such educational services beginning at age 5.

P.L. 94-142 requires of all schools:

- Identification and location of all handicapped children age birth to 21.
- Coordination of efforts with other service agencies to locate handicapped children.
- Development of an Individualized Education Program (I.E.P.) for each handicapped child with that child's parents.
- Provision of an appropriate educational program as specified in the I.E.P. to each handicapped child (in Ohio, aged 5-18).
- Keeping all information about the child and the child's program confidential.

By providing information to the State Department of Education through "Child-Find" that shows how many suspected/confirmed handicapped children will be attending school each year, agencies and parents will be helping schools to plan for and provide appropriate educational opportunities to each handicapped child.

SERRC/Child-Find (Project OHIO) is the method by which Ohio gathers necessary handicapped child identification information. There are 16 Special Education Regional Resource Centers in Ohio that provide special education services to the local school districts within their regions. One service provided is "Child-Find" (Project OHIO) in which SERRC staff arrange for agencies providing services to handicapped children to report to local school districts the number of children being served. Such a report enables each school district to begin planning ahead to provide appropriate educational opportunities for the handicapped children.

WHO

Who may be identified as being handicapped?

WHO

may be identified as being handicapped?

All handicapped children should be reported to the State Department of Education through "Child-Find". Reporting done by agencies should be by numbers of children with various handicapping conditions. Reporting done by parents may be by name and type of suspected handicapping condition.

In reporting to the State Department of Education through "Child-Find", definitions of handicapping conditions used by the reporting agency must be consistent with those used by Ohio's schools. For that reason, the following chart is provided as a guide to the definitions used by Ohio's schools.

Perforated copies of each form are included with this section for your reporting convenience.

HOW

should reports be completed?

1

Each Head Start program is to maintain a Center Handicapped Enrollment roster.

This roster is to be kept at the grantee/delegate central office.

This step will provide a method of keeping current enrollment information within each Head Start central office. The roster will:

- provide immediate accessibility to general information about the handicapped children enrolled in each center.
- provide a centralized location and method for notifying staff of needed documentation for those children remaining in "pending" status.
- provide recording information which will be necessary in reporting the handicapped children enrolled in Head Start to the State Department of Education through "Child-Find".

Each Head Start Director/Handicap Coordinator will:

a

Complete Head Start Report of Handicapped Enrollment (P/O-2)

To be completed in triplicate as shown on example.

Complete Tally of Handicapping Conditions (P/O-1)

Information from the Center Handicap Enrollment roster (or other such record-keeping) will be used to complete this tally. It should be prepared in triplicate.

Each Head Start Director/Handicap Coordinator will:

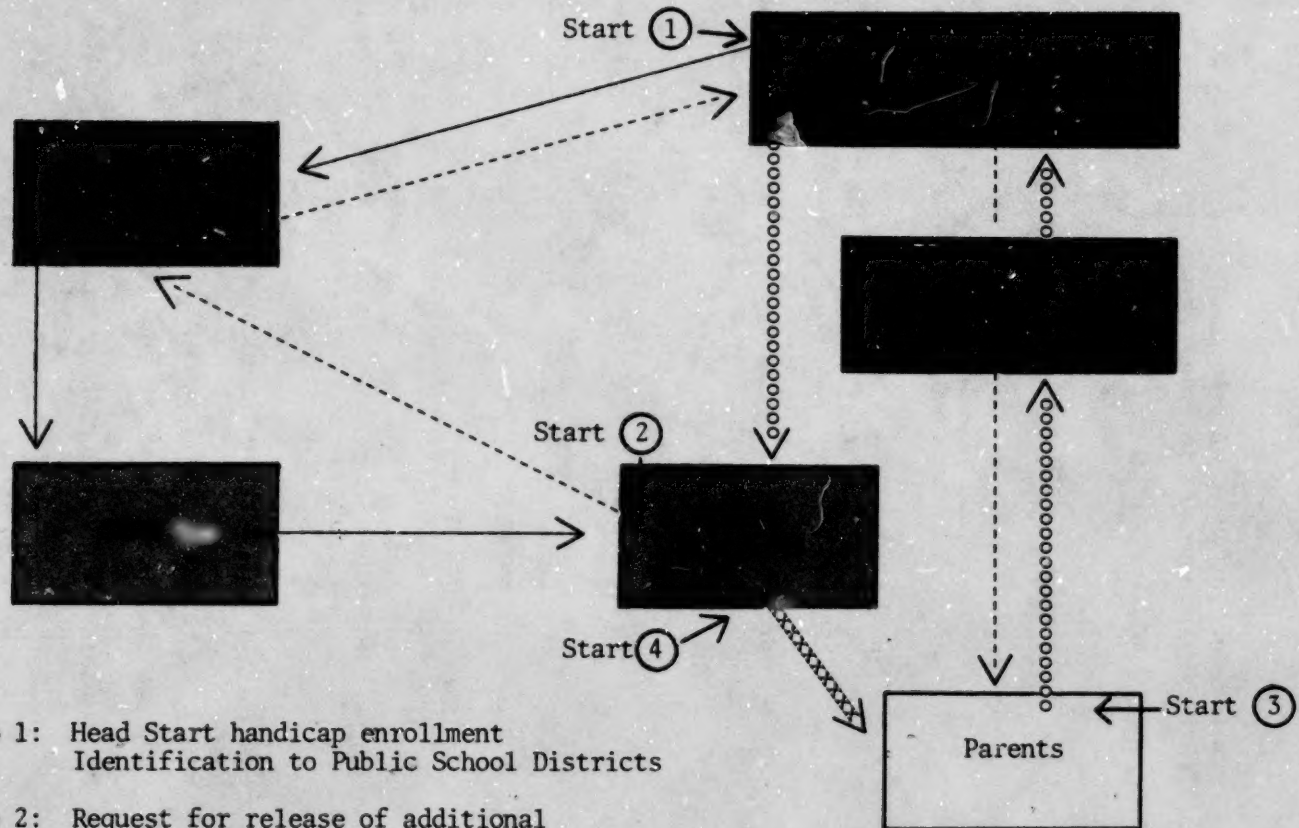

send the Enrollment Tally and Report, with a cover letter, to the appropriate "Child-Find" staff.

Copies of the report are also to be sent to the Handicap Advocate and are to be filed at the local Head Start central office.

Special Notice:

Head Start administrative staff must obtain the parents' written consent to release any additional information about a child.

WHAT

What else should agencies consider?

WHAT

else should agencies consider?

1

Follow-Thru Activities

There are several ways in which Head Start agencies and educators can cooperate to share information and plan together to meet the needs of young handicapped children.

Share program literature and information

As part of awareness activities, agencies could provide descriptive literature to each other. Such literature may include brochures describing current activities, program offerings and availability of services; pamphlets or booklets providing a more detailed description of specific services; and even samples of manuals used as part of staff training or inservice programs.

Awareness of other agency programs and services can lead to more appropriate referrals of clients. Appropriate referrals will decrease the amount of time spent in screening and making additional referrals, and will save much confusion on the part of clients who are unfamiliar with the variety of agencies and services that exist.

Invite representatives of other agencies to attend staff inservice programs

Information provided to staffs who work with young handicapped children is often useful to staffs of other agencies. For example, an inservice program concerning identification of handicapped children (recognizing characteristics) would be valuable to Head Start personnel, primary teachers, doctors, and case workers who visit homes in which young children may live. Although space and materials may be limited, it would be helpful to invite at least a representative of other agencies to attend such inservice programs. This would encourage interagency cooperation and make needed information available to as many people as possible.

Plan together

It is becoming more and more important to coordinate service efforts. The best way to accomplish such coordination is to participate in joint planning sessions and to invite representatives of other agencies to join existing planning boards and committees. By becoming aware of activities that are being planned by other agencies, it is possible to coordinate efforts and avoid duplication of activities. Such cooperation also lends solid public relations support to the activity, as the community views agencies joining hands to provide the best service possible. Such joint efforts may also lead to decreased spending on both sides and therefore free funds for other service activities.

Role of Parents

Parents play a key role in all agency activities related to handicapped children. Most important is parents cooperation, patience and support of the staff members who provide direct assistance to the children. The importance of such support often cannot be measured. It provides motivation to staff members to continue their work, which is often difficult and energy-draining. It provides a sense of job satisfaction for staff members, whose jobs require much patience and may have infrequent rewards of any other kind. Parents and direct service staff members are able to share many responsibilities for the education and emotional well-being of the child. By sharing those responsibilities, parents and staff members can share the joys and frustrations that will come with each activity.

Parents also play an important role in the process of obtaining and providing services. Federal and state laws guarantee that parents will be provided a full opportunity to assist in all phases of planning and providing for the educational needs of their child.

Watching for problems and finding assistance

Parents should watch for any signs that their child may be having difficulty in seeing, hearing, or speaking. They should also watch for significant delays in child's walking, speaking or similar activities. If the parent, hospital or doctor notice any problems that may require special assistance, the parent should be sure that the appropriate service personnel are contacted immediately.

For problems associated with:

Testing

Parents will be asked to give their permission for the child to be tested to determine what problems may exist and what sort of help may be provided. It is important for parents to:

- understand what tests will be done and how
- fill out necessary papers as quickly as possible
- provide any information they may have about their child's health, growth, behavior, etc. That information will be considered during the testing.
- bring the child to the testing location on time

c

Planning

Parents will be asked to attend a meeting to review the test results and make plans for their child. Parents should make every effort to attend the meeting and:

- find out the test results
- ask questions about anything that is not clear
- find out what services are available
- give permission for services to be provided

The plan that is developed will be called an Individualized Education Program (I.E.P.)

d

Receiving Services

During the time the child is receiving services, parents should:

- keep in touch with the person providing services
- ask if there are ways to help at home
- participate in activities that involve parents
- keep track of the child's progress towards goals that were planned

Changing plans and services

Because the child's needs will change, parents should be alert to those changes and:

- ask for conferences to discuss changes in the plans and services
- participate in conferences suggested by the agency
- understand what changes are suggested and why
- grant permission for appropriate changes to be made

Federal and state laws provide parents with the right to see and examine their child's records and deny permission for activities to occur. The laws also require agencies to tell parents about their rights. Parents should be sure that they have received and understand their rights related to services provided for their child.

Other Agencies Serving Preschool Children

There are a variety of agencies that interact in some way with preschool children. Churches and day care centers have preschool programs and private agencies provide similar services. Personnel in those agencies should be knowledgeable about services available to preschool and school age handicapped children, and should be alert to signs of a handicap that may not be immediately or easily recognizable.

All agencies serving preschool children should arrange a method of referral of suspected handicapped children to school districts or Special Education Regional Resource Centers. Such agencies may wish to use a method similar to the one described in this booklet.

The importance of establishing referral connections between agencies providing services to preschool children and school districts/SERRCs cannot be overemphasized. With increased research in diagnosis and education of children with handicapping conditions, it is known that much can be done to assist such children. But the children must be located, the earlier in their lives the better. We encourage all other agencies serving preschool children to contact the nearest school district or SERRC to arrange referral methods such as the one described here. A list of SERRCs is found in the appendix.

A. Definitions

Following is a list of terms that are frequently used in programs for handicapped children.

Mainstreaming

Refers to the placement of handicapped children with non-handicapped children for activities which both can do together. It does not mean placing children together for activities which they are not able to do together, or which would in any way harm or impair the other. It does reflect the basic idea that all children should be educated together as much as possible, when their educational needs are similar.

Project OHIO "Child-Find"

These activities are carried on by school districts and SERRCs with the assistance of the Ohio Department of Education to locate all suspected handicapped children age birth to 21.

SERRC

(Special Education Regional Resource Center)
Established by the Ohio Department of Education in 1969, SERRCs provide support services related to special education to school districts. They assist in locating and assessing suspected handicapped children and provide specialized educational materials to teachers of handicapped children. (See map and address list, Appendix E)
